LOCATION

The property is located in Folkestone, a port town in Kent, situated on the southern edge of the North Downs. Folkestone is approximately 8 miles west of Dover, 15.5 miles south of Ashford, 34 miles south of Maidstone and 70 miles south of Central London.

The area benefits from very good accessibility and transport links with the M20 situated 2 miles to the north, which links Folkestone to Ashford, the M25, and onto the national motorway network. Folkestone Central Train Station is located 0.5 miles to the north and provides direct services to London Charing Cross via Tonbridge (in approximately 1hr 25 minutes) and to Ramsgate (in approximately 50 minutes).

Folkestone provides a range of amenities, with a traditional High Street offering various local and national retailers, numerous public houses and other amenities. Folkestone also provides a reasonable range of schools in both the public and private sector and, more recently has become popular for its art scene which has seen some renewed investment in the Town Centre.

DESCRIPTION

The property comprises a Grade II listed, former dilapidated Edwardian pavilion on Folkestone's seafront occupying a direct sea facing elevation position. The pavilion had a long history having first opened in 1902 as a tearoom for the Edwardian aristocracy which later became a theatre, café and nightclub.

Construction works have begun on the site, with the Leas pavilion at lower ground floor level, having been partially removed for restoration at a later date. Groundworks have taken place on the site and the central lift/stairwell cores have been put in place. The site is broadly rectangular in shape and of a flat topography.

The application site also contains two surface car parks located adjacent either side of the Leas Pavilion. The site extends to approximately 0.6 acres (0.2 hectares)
